EDITOR'S FORUM

"THE INTERNATIONAL SIX," as Arthur Brisbane calls Copernicus, Kepler, Tycho Brahe, Galileo, Descartes and Newton, would probably turn over in their respective graves if they could today witness his arbitrary treatment of their interest in astrology.* In a series now appearing each Sunday in the Hearst papers Brisbane proceeds both to elevate them to the scientific hierarchy, and at the same time class them as superstitious fools, preying on the ignorance of their benefactors.

While with one breath he lauds them to the skies for their astronomical discoveries, in the next he deprecates their use of celestial knowledge to guide the destinies of their fellowmen. As long as they regarded the planets as inert spheres of matter, devoid of influence, they were heroes; but let them declare their empirical knowledge of planetary vibrations on human life and they are rank charlatans.

Can it be that Kepler and Brahe led a sort of "Jekyll and Hyde" existence? Are we to believe that two men, struggling as they did against poverty and narrow-mindedness, to catalogue the stars and wrest from them the secrets of their movements and influences, would stoop to trickery or promulgate a false theory for mercenary motives?

In the Los Angeles Examiner of Sunday, August 12, Brisbane writes as follows: "Both Tycho Brahe and Kepler, working for the Emperor Rudolph of Bohemia, were employed by him not as astronomers but as experts in astrology, supposed to tell his fortune by reading the stars." To cap the climax he adds: "They did that more or less mechanically to make him happy." And as if this, and his remarks on Tycho Brahe's use of Medical Astrology in healing the poor, the preceding Sunday, were not enough, he adds insult to injury by suffixing the fact that "Kepler in his last year even published an astrological prophesying almanack" with: "He despised it but needed the money."

Needless to say, facts do not support Brisbane's arbitrary endeavor to infer cupidity on the part of these great men in their practice of Astrology. Numerous instances exist of successful predictions made by Tycho Brahe, including that of "the great plague," mentioned derisively by Brisbane in his article on the great Dane, and Brahe's celebrated prophecy, after the great comet of 1577, that "in the north, in Finland, there should be born a prince who should lay waste Germany and vanish in 1632." Even the Encyclopedia Britannica was stumped by that one, for time proved the accuracy of the famous astrologer's interpretation of the comet's warning, in the rise of the prince Gustavus Adolphus, who was born in Finland, ravaged Germany during the Thirty Years' War, and died as Brahe had predicted in 1632. In commenting on this remarkable fulfillment of this prophecy Brittanica remarks: "The fulfillment of the details of this prophecy suggests that Tycho Brahe had some basis of reason for his prediction" (!)

We are indebted to Ralph E. Kraum, research astrologer of Hollywood, California, for the horoscope of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., used by Karl Van Dyke in his article on Standard Oil's founder, which appears elsewhere in this issue.

General Villa
With Aides, 1914
At the Peak of Their Power

PANCHO VILLA, the glamorous bandit patriot of Mexico, was born October 4, 1877 in the town of Rio Grande, state of Durango, Mexico. Little is known concerning the early life of this remarkable man, but in a recent biography the time of his birth is given as being before sunrise. Pancho Villa was christened Doroteo Arango which he later Francisco "Pancho" Villa, because of his admiration for a local bandit of that name. To his adoring doradoes, Villa was never Francisco, captain, or general, but always just Pancho.

"VIVA VILLA"

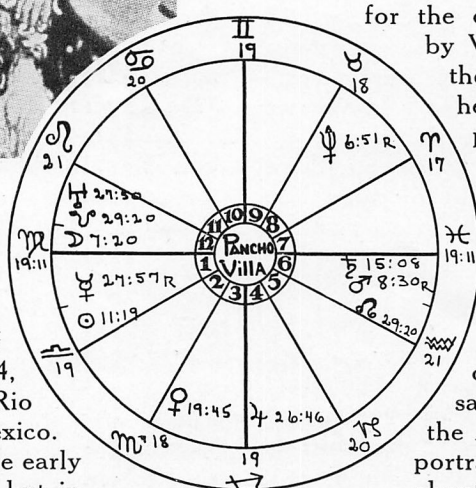

In Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's recent picture, "Viva Villa," Mexico's beloved bad man rides again. Although in many respects the picture deviates from history, Wallace Beery's characterization of the picturesque outlaw is probably not far from accurate as regards personal temperament and character. Villa was more than a bandit. Driven to a life of brigandage by the inhumanities of the peonage system of the Diaz regime and the cruelty of the hacendadoes, Villa grew up by a bitter code. He lived to avenge and revenge.

In calculating Villa's chart we have considered 20° of Virgo to be the most likely Ascendant. Charubel describes this degree as signifying: One void of fear, living in the consciousness of superior strength, ever on the alert and defensive; a lionlike person. Villa's great love

Pancho Villa

The Horoscope of Mexico's Colorful Bandit Patriot

By MANLY HALL

Pancho Villa's Horoscope set for October 4, 1877, 4:19 A.M., Rio Grande, Durango, Mex.

for the common people is indicated by Virgo, the sign of service, on the Ascendant. For ten years he battled for the rights of the peons, avenging the evils done to them, and laying the foundation for the new era of enlightenment in Mexico.

According to this chart, Mars came up to an opposition of the Ascendant when Villa was about eleven years old, and at approximately the same time the Moon conjuncted the Ascendant. According to the portrayal in the picture, Villa was about this age when his father was beaten to death.

HIS SISTER'S ABDUCTION

Villa killed his first man when he was twenty years old. A minor officer of the Federal army abducted his sister. Villa pursued them for nearly a week, forced the officer to marry his sister, and to sign his own death certificate. He then stood the man against a wall and shot him. According to Naibod progressions, the aspects at this occurrence were as follows: Mars opposition Mercury, Neptune square Uranus, Venus square Mars, Uranus conjunct the Ascendant. It will be noted that Mars is the ruler of the 3rd house, signifying brothers and sisters, and Venus in the 3rd house represents the sister. Both of these planets are involved in the chain of evil directions.

After this episode, Villa fled to the hills. The Federal Government gradually awakened to the realization of Villa's growing power and contempt of authority. Ten thousand pesos were offered for his capture, dead or alive. Villa's outlaw years followed. He remained an anti-social element in Mexican life for nearly fifteen years. All during this time Uranus was progressing through his first house, making a conjunction to the Ascendant at his first anti-social act.

STARS MIRRORED HIS FRIENDSHIP FOR MADERO

To hasten the overthrow of President Diaz, who was favoring the cause of the aristocrats and landowners, Villa cast his fortunes with Francisco Madero. Madero was born on the same day as Villa, October 4, but four years earlier; thus the two men had their Suns in conjunction. Madero's Jupiter was also conjunct Villa's Ascendant, his Mars conjunct Villa's Jupiter, his Venus conjunct Villa's Moon, and his Neptune trine Villa's Jupiter and Uranus. It seems that it was in the stars that these two men should come together.

One of Villa's most important battles after he ceased to be a bandit and became a patriot, was the capture of Juarez in May, 1911. At this time his progressed Sun was trining Saturn, his progressed Mars was opposing the Sun, and his progressed Neptune was trining the Sun. On September 16, 1916, Villa captured Chihuahua. Madero had already been assassinated by Huerta's soldiers. Villa's capture of Chihuahua is regarded as his outstanding achievement in military strategy. He proclaimed to the Federal army some time in advance, the day he intended to capture the city which was therefore strongly reenforced. With a small group of picked men in disguise, Villa entered the city without being recognized, and the battle was over before the Federal army had really a chance to offer any organized resistance. At this time Villa's Ascendant was sextile Uranus, Mercury was opposition Neptune, Sun sextile the Ascendant and conjunct Venus, and his Neptune was square Saturn. To a certain measure Villa was a man of destiny in Mexico. A certain fatality attended his every action, and it is common under such circumstances to find the planet Neptune powerful and active.

HIS RETIREMENT AND DEATH

After the establishment of the Obregon government in Mexico, Villa retired to a considerable tract of land which had been granted him by the government. He had also been presented with a considerable amount of farming machinery and began an active agricultural life, but he had lived by violence, and by violence he died. While driving his automobile on July 20, 1923, he and his secretary and two body guards were literally riddled with bullets by persons unknown. Some believe his assassination was an act of revenge, others that it was a political move. From the chart we would say that the latter was most likely. At the time of his death, Villa's Ascendant had come to an opposition of Neptune in the Eighth house, Neptune to a square of the Ascendant, and the Sun had come to a square of Uranus. According to the Ptolemaic method of progression, in the year of Villa's death his progressed Mars had reached 19:21 of Pisces, and therefore was opposing his Ascendant.

The nativity of Villa is not that of just a desperado. His Sun in the Ascendant bestowed a powerful personality, and Mercury essentially dignified in the first house a strong and acute intellect, rendered somewhat fanatical by an exaggerated sense of justice due to a square from Jupiter. His cruelty arose largely from ignorance. He fought "the only way he knew," but when General Scott of the United States Army explained to him that the murder of prisoners was unethical in warfare, he ceased such practices.

FOUGHT FOR POOR

The Sun in Libra gave Villa a high sense of justice, and the combination of Virgo and Libra indicates a strong and real desire to contribute to the common good. In a conversation with Frazier Hunt, Villa expressed his philosophy in these words: "Poor, ignorant Mexico. Until they have education, nothing much can be done. I know. I was twenty-five before I could sign my own name. I know what it is to try to help people who cannot understand what you are trying to do for them. I had a Finances to improve. Increased business shown. Epidemic likely. Foreign affairs to prosper. Army and navy in spotlight.

• Until September eight, and even beyond that time, a continued improvement in general financial affairs is indicated. (Aug. lunation near cusp of second.) The administration will come in for severe criticism (Mars square M.C.); party differences and "red" activities are noted; a continued necessity to guard the President is shown. (Uranus, eleventh.)

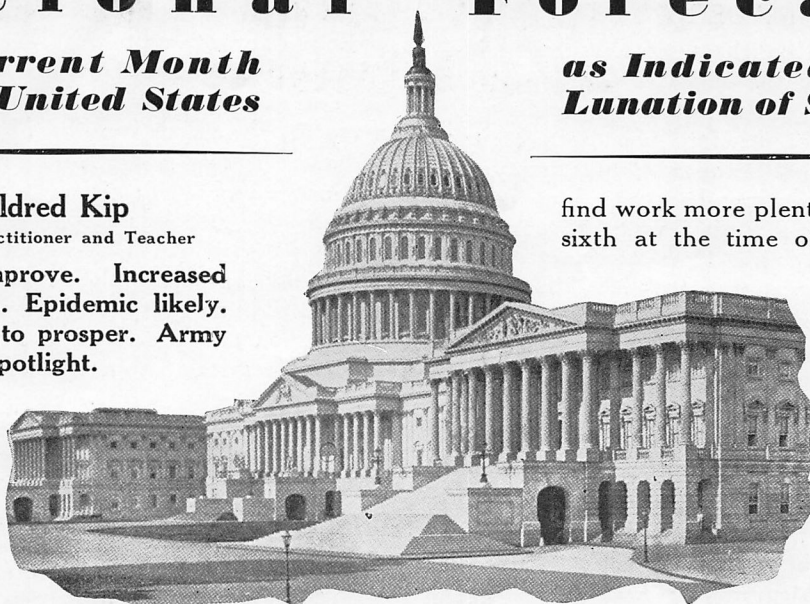

There will be an increase in business activity with factory production stepping up. Army and Navy affairs are likely to occupy front page positions this month. Discontent, or possibly disorders, in the Navy is indicated. (Sept. lunation sixth house.)

A scandal, which may or may not be made public, regarding the home loan, is likely. Communistic tendencies will be noted and steps taken to eradicate them. Some queer weather may be looked for. (Pluto fourth house.)

The health of the nation will be good in certain localities only; in others there will be epidemics. A feverish stomach complaint, possibly similar to intestinal "flu," is likely to take a toll of lives, particularly those of children. (Mars in fifth, lunation in sixth.)

Fires in places of amusement and schools, the death of someone prominent in the amusement world are indicated. Most unfortunate rays operate for the President and the ruling bodies of the nation. (Mars in fifth house.)

Cosmetics, women's apparel, and all forms of adornment for women should sell well this month. Things which please the public taste for delicacies in the food line will also find buyers. Artists, musicians, nurses, doctors should find work more plentiful. (Venus in sixth at the time of the lunation.)

Foreign affairs will prosper; friendly relations will be established and maintained with a foreign nation. We should read about the arrival of some important foreign visitors. Action will be taken regarding the war debts. Possibly this move will result from the idea that it might be well to mend fences on the part of some of our national debtors. (Jupiter in seventh house trine Saturn.)

More jobs available. Important fire or accident seen. Foreign relations good. Important visitor expected. Public servants in limelight.

• Finances are highlighted until September eighth. (August lunation near second, favorable to Jupiter.) The first, fourth and seventh days of this month are worth noting. We may find some developments brought forward during that time of vital importance to the country.

After the eighth matters concerning employment, employees, labor, food, clothing, small pets, and health are highlighted. (September lunation in sixth.) Signs of unrest will be evident among the working classes. A lack of sympathy and understanding will be noticeable between employer and employee. (Mercury and Neptune in sixth.)

Even though there will be an increased number of complaints from those in employment, at the same time more jobs will be obtained. There will be greater activity among laboring classes and they will obtain some definite and

International Affairs—the World at a Glance

By HOPE HERALD

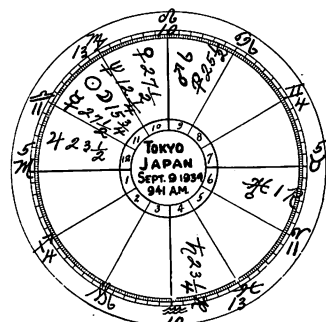

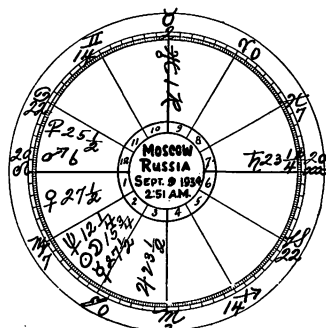

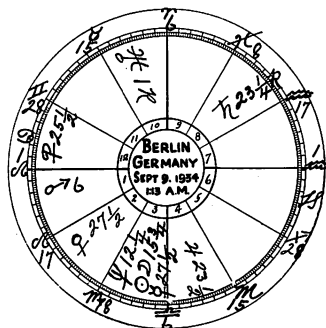

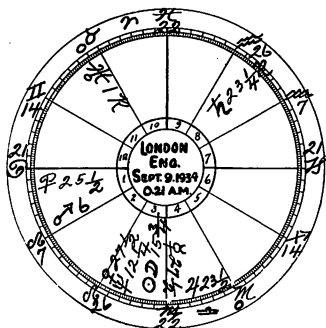

WASHINGTON, D. C. The lunation, operative between September 8 and October 8, is a paradox, or we might say a complex, in that it reflects a negative yet active set of influences which will alternate and work in circles. The outstanding features for Washington refer to such subjects as labor, health, the army and navy, with a possibility of some intense public feeling, and even rioting. Coming so close to Labor Day, I look for demonstrations in the eastern section of the United States.

Children and young women, as well as theatres and schools, come under discordant vibrations, with the possible destruction of property by fire and loss of life. (See Washington Chart, on cover.)

ENGLAND AND FRANCE. Transportation is the keynote of this chart, and this subject will come strongly before the public, with the possibility of labor troubles and demands for financial reform. Agriculture and mining are favored.

GERMANY AND ITALY. Another drastic and dangerous set of planetary currents will overshadow this section, and the country will be fortunate if it can avert a wave of social unrest. Schools, theatres and places of amusement come under highly inflammable aspects. Finances are ill favored, and transportation will be one of the problems. Mining and agriculture are favored.

The influences for Rome are very much the same as for Berlin.

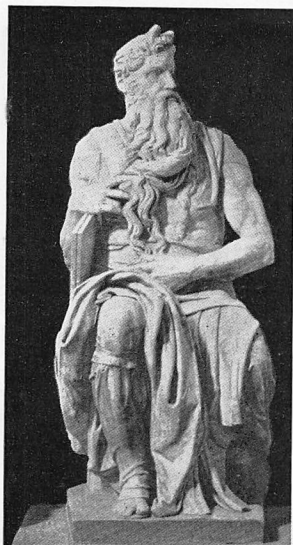

RUSSIA. Chaotic financial conditions are indicated. Mining and agriculture come under constructive influences. Public officials will have secret enmity directed toward them. Foreign affairs will be rather heavy, with notes of discord through social matters.

JAPAN AND THE ORIENT. Militant and aggressive influences will be in operation in Japan, with hatred directed towards public officials. There is a rather strong earthquake combination of aspects for places near this longitude (140° east). To some extent these will operate throughout the world, but stronger near this meridian. The diet (congress) will be subject to confusion.

In some ways, China is better favored, although notes of sharpness run through the chart, especially in connection with the heads of the government and foreign affairs.

SUMMARY. The foregoing is based on the following planetary and zodiacal influences: The lunation (Sun and Moon) is in close conjunction with the planet Neptune in the sign Virgo, the sign ruling labor, health, the army and navy. Neptune is associated with chaos and deception. Mars is square to the eccentric Uranus, and this aspect is one of a highly explosive and antagonistic nature, capable of destruction of life and property. Jupiter trine Saturn conserves and plans for the future. Venus opposing Saturn brings sorrows to women and children.

Michael Angelo's "Moses"

More Hidden Pages from Moses' Life in Egypt

He Defeats the Ethiopians, but is Revealed as a Hebrew by the High Priest

By COUNT LOUIS HAMON "Cheiro"

IN my last article I showed how Moses under the name of Rameses "the son of Pharaoh's daughter" had been educated and brought up "in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," so that, when the time came, he would be able and fitted for the great work of deliverer of the Israelites from bondage.

For the first forty years of his life Moses had no idea that he was a Hebrew. Believing himself an Egyptian, and only son of the reigning queen of the then most powerful nation of the world, he was proud of the fact.

The secret of his birth had been carefully guarded by his supposed mother, whom history tells us had banished to far-off lands the maids of honor who had witnessed her rescue of the infant from the little ark of bulrushes.

The only persons who knew her secret were his real mother, Jochebed, his father, Amram the gardener, Aaron his elder brother, and his sister, Miriam, who had followed the ark down the Nile until it had floated into the gardens of the royal palace.

There were, however, two men in high positions in Egypt who had some suspicions of the truth. The one was Prince Moeris, nephew of the Queen and ruler of the great province of Thebes; the other, the all powerful High Priest of the Temple of On.

The first mentioned, Prince Moeris, was the son of the brother of her husband, the Prince of Thebes, who had been killed in battle with the Ethiopians a few months after her marriage. This Prince Moeris, through his spies, had discovered that the Queen, his aunt, about the time when she disclosed that she had given birth to a son whom she called Rameses, had banished from Egypt several of her maids of honor. This fact had aroused his suspicions.

Following this trail for many years, in the end he discovered that two of these women were still living and, under promise of bringing them back to their country, he forced the secret from their lips. Armed with his terrible knowledge he had blackmailed the Queen for years, compelling her, first, to make him High Admiral of her Fleet, and, later, Supreme Ruler of Thebes and the southern part of her dominions.

But with all these great positions he was not satisfied. He watched with envious eyes, as the years went on, the rapid advancement of the young Rameses and, when he heard of his appointment as Commander-in-Chief of the Egyptian army, he could control himself no longer. Forcing his presence before the Queen, he demanded her abdication of the throne in his own favor.

The unhappy Queen, fearful that her secret would be disclosed, her subjects rise in revolt and perhaps tear her and Rameses in pieces, for some time temporized with the ambitious Prince, giving him jewels, great wealth, and in the end going so far as to promise that he would, at her death, reign as her successor. These gifts and promises kept her tormentor quiet for some years, giving her time to evolve other plans, one of which was that, when an opportune moment arrived, she would give the crown of upper and lower Egypt to Rameses, whom she loved with all her heart and soul.

Her other enemy, the all powerful High Priest of On, had no idea of the plans of the ambitious Prince Moeris, but was equally determined to find some pretense to ruin the Queen, or at least have her in his power. He even had dreams of his becoming another Pharaoh. It is quite probable that he also had heard the story of those maids of honor who had been banished to some distant country, but his real suspicion that Rameses was not the son of the Queen had been arrived at from quite a different point of view.

As High Priest his position had brought under his notice the intellectual-looking Hebrew maiden called Miriam, the scribe, who worked in the library of the temple as a copier and translator of the sacred books. Something about her face and dignity of bearing recalled to his mind the same lofty expression and noble carriage of the young Rameses, as he passed through his studies in the temple. Then there was Aaron, another Hebrew, the skillful maker of the gold images of the gods at Memphis, a young man whom the Queen herself had appointed to this responsible position. Lastly, there was her Majesty's imperial edict, on ascending the throne after the death of her father, that the burdens of the Hebrews should be lightened—that no longer, under the whips of taskmasters, should they be forced to labor in the brickfields, or drag, like oxen, huge stones for the building of the pyramids.

With all this passing in his mind the High Priest of On formed a subtle plan to discover if what he suspected was the truth.

He called to his aid his beautiful daughter, the Princess Vashti, priestess and overseer of the thousand vestal virgins in the Temple of the Sun. Releasing her from her vows and gaining the favor of the Queen, he placed her in the royal court as personal maid of honor to her Majesty.

His plans worked well. A day came when, as Commander-in-Chief of the army, Rameses gave battle to the invading Ethiopians, who on this occasion, flushed by previous victories, outnumbered the Egyptian troops by more than ten to one.

On the day in question the crafty Priest sent messengers to the Queen with reports that her army had been defeated and Rameses, her son, made prisoner by the victorious invaders. He even offered his services as co-ruler to save her from the impending revolt that the disastrous news would be sure to bring about.

Her Majesty did not send for the High Priest, but she did what perhaps any other woman would have done in the same cruel position. She sent for Jochebed, the real mother of the man she regarded as her son.

Was ever drama more poignant—a queen of Egypt and a lowly Hebrew woman brought face to face by grief! Two mothers, the one by nature, the other by love, joined by common bonds of anxiety and sorrow, seeking hope and comfort from each other's hearts! The foster mother, Queen of Egypt, with her lost faith in the gods of her people! The real mother with her increased faith in the "One God," the Lord of Hosts of the Hebrew race!

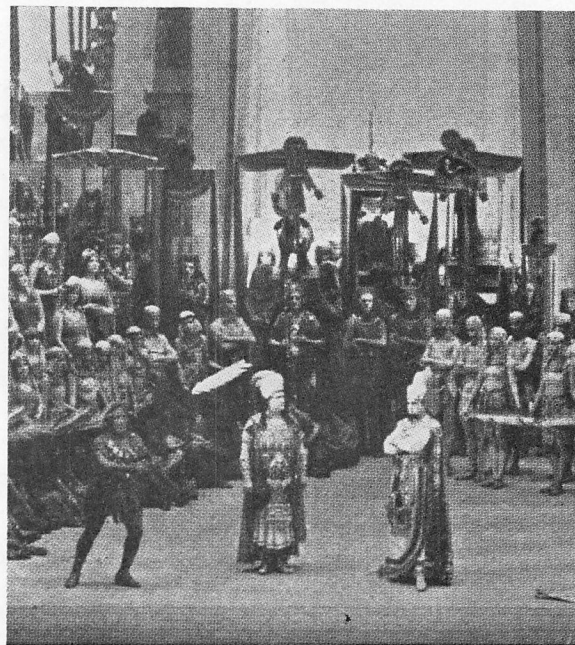

I can imagine the real mother, as if inspired, answering: "Have no fear, O Queen! Our son will come back in triumph. The God of the Hebrews promised that, at the end of four hundred years, He would raise up a deliverer to release His people. The time is near at hand. My heart tells me that our son will be 'the Deliverer.' Have no fear, O Queen! He will return to you with victory over your enemies."

Outside the door of the Queen's apartments the Princess Vashti was listening. She had heard the secret: Rameses' real mother was an Israelite. The Princess hastened to her father, the High Priest, with the startling news.

The High Priest of On silently prepared his plans. On the day when Rameses returned in triumph, with the King of the Ethiopians in chains behind his chariot, he led a revolt against the Queen, denouncing her deception to her people. Standing on the steps of the throne, he proclaimed Rameses, her supposed son, a Hebrew, the child of Amram the gardener.

The exposure broke the proud heart of the Queen. Her plans had failed. She died that evening.

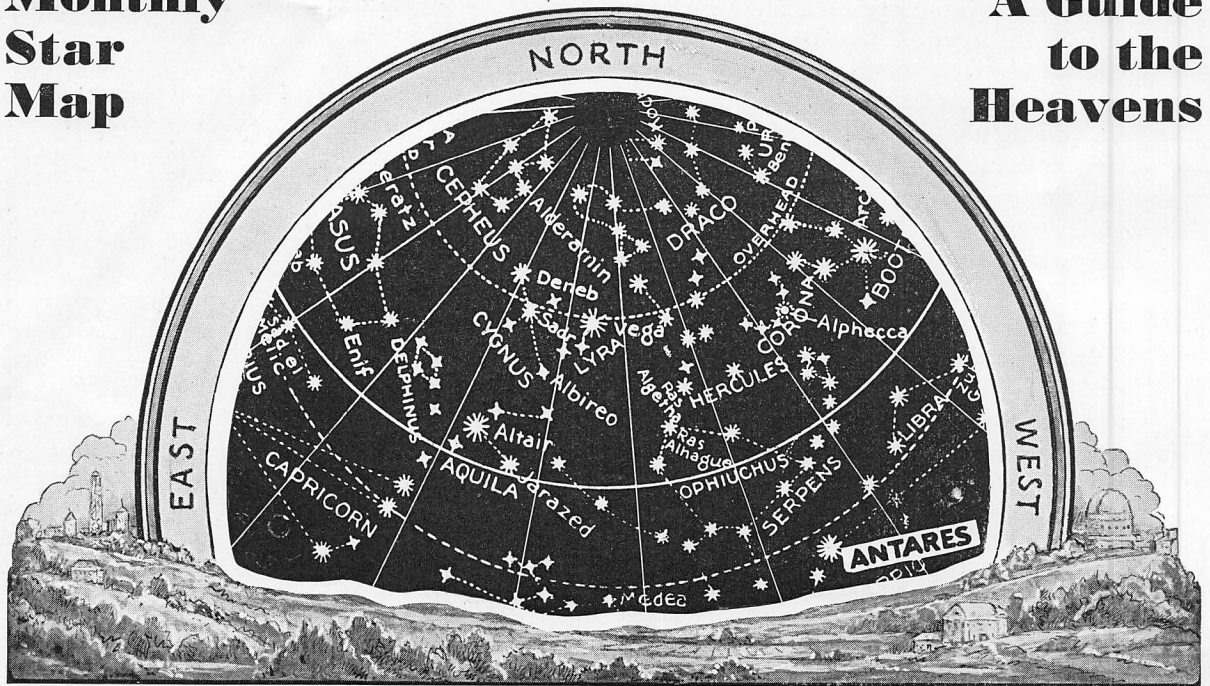

The triumphant return of Moses with the Ethiopian king in chains, as related by Cheiro, is illustrated above by a scene from Verdi's "Aida" in which opera Egypt's victory is re-enacted.

A Guide to the Heavens

September's Skies Bring Opportunity for Study of Antares, While Hercules Circles Overhead

By ELBERT BENJAMINE
President of The Church of Light

THE mightiest hero of old, was Hercules. It is fitting, therefore, that his constellation in the sky should be of vast extent. It lies between two of the smallest constellations, Corona Borealis, the Northern Crown, and Lyra, the Harp. Vega, the conspicuous white star of first magnitude in Lyra, culminates directly overhead September 1, about 7:55 p.m.

Not so appropriate, it might seem at first thought, that Hercules should contain no star of first magnitude. Yet hold! Although barely discernable to the unaided eye on an exceptionally clear night, in this constellation the telescope discovers a tremendous system of giant suns, each of far greater brilliancy than our Sun, crowded together in a vast globular cluster.

Even with the most powerful telescope, our Sun, at that distance, 35,000 light-years, would be invisible. Yet more than 100,000 suns have been counted in this great ball, each far enough from its neighbor, even though they look crowded, that it may have a system of planets like our own revolving around it.

Additional interest is given to this section of the heavens, because it is toward a point on the boundary between Hercules and Lyra, toward which our Sun, with its family of planets, is known to be speeding at the rate of twelve and one-half miles a second.

Beginners in astrology sometimes erroneously think of the precession of the equinoxes, by which the zodiacal signs shift back through the constellations at the rate of 30 degrees in about 2,160 years, as being due to our Sun moving in an orbit. It is really due to a wobble of the earth, and has no relation to any movement of the Sun.

Hercules gained most renown by his twelve great labors; one for each zodiacal sign. It need occasion no surprise, therefore, that Labor Day falls each year at the time the Sun has entered the middle-decanate of the zodiacal sign ruling labor. This Saturn-decanate of Virgo, pictured in the heavens by Hercules, is occupied by the Sun from September 3, to September 13.

If the festivities were to honor political personages, we should expect them to be observed on Sunday. If they were to encourage art, we should expect Friday to be chosen. Thursday would be more appropriate for the celebration of attaining wealth. But the Moon rules the common people, those who sweat and toil and hope for jobs; and thus Labor Day, responding to that intangible, yet dimly felt and always effective, Law of Correspondences, falls on the day of the Moon, Monday, while the Sun is in the section of the sky pictured by the greatest toiler in world tradition.

Hercules, on one knee, apparently is stamping vigorously with his other foot upon the head of the Dragon, which winds its slimy length about Polaris, the star of Truth. In the St. George version of the story, this monster, symbolizing that greed for power which perverts truth, and through deceit holds labor in unfair bondage, was slain.

Neptune, ruling the socialistic idea, has now entered this Hercules-decanate of the working sign, and Mars comes conjunction with it here on Armistice Day; which gives rise to the conjecture that Hercules will do some mighty stamping before the present year is ended.

ANTARES — RIVAL OF MARS

We should not permit the procession of the autumn sky to pass without some notice of another giant, this time the most gigantic of all the suns. One of the most beautiful and striking constellations is Scorpio, in the evening now well down toward the southwestern horizon. And in the heart of this denizen of the desert which has been transported to the sky, is Antares, so far as known the largest of the suns.

The word Antares means, rival of Mars; and when Mars, as it sometimes does, passes in front of the stars of this mighty constellation while far from the earth and thus less brilliant than usual, the fiery red color and brilliance of the star make it difficult with the unaided eye to determine which is the planet and which the vastly more distant Sun.

Antares not only is a youthful giant, but the largest yet discovered, having a diameter of over 414,000,000 miles.

This means that if Antares were where our Sun is, its surface would extend far beyond the orbit of Mars. Mercury, Venus, Earth and Mars all would lie beneath its surface. And, so distant is Antares from us, that its light, that we now see of an evening, left the star on its journey over a century ago.

Fall Style Forecast for Women

By RITA DEL MAR

Formerly of the Del Mar Whitney Studios

ELEGANCE, simplicity and good taste mark the major trend of fall clothes, (Jupiter in Libra). Extremely slender body lines with the fullness below the knee and in the form of capes, bows or fur treatment at the neck and shoulders lend an airy, graceful Libran touch.

Color will be a very important matter and you cannot go wrong if you will permit Venus (planetary ruler of Libra) to guide you in your choice. She rules green primarily, altho she has much to do with blue and yellow. Her metal is copper and she looks with favor upon the browns of coppery hues.

For daytime clothes, choose the browns above referred to, medium to dark greens and the dark blues, and lady Venus will reward you by enhancing your attractiveness. For evening clothes, any of these colors in velvet or else the jewel shades so long associated with Libra are recommended.

In color accents, we can think of nothing more lovely than the vivid, peculiar green which appears as a fine rust on copper when it is oxidizing. If you have seen this shade, you will have no difficulty in picking a shade of green that is unusually attractive. All the blue and yellow-greens, yellow and light shades of blue are also advised.

The designers seem to have planned in accordance with the current planetary influence almost entirely and it is difficult to say when they will start to market the clothes influenced by a major planetary change which takes place in October. However, if you wish to be ahead of the market be prepared for sharper, more severely tailored lines and a touch of the military. (Jupiter will enter Scorpio.)

Dull reds, magentas; deep orange, claret and all the angry shades will gain headway. Dark brown and green will gradually replace the coppery tones and cleaner green shades. Soft, harmonious lines will give way to powerful, bold strokes in design. (Jupiter's influence in Scorpio.)

Some advanced efforts were made this summer to introduce a Persian feeling in materials and lines. We predict quite a bit of success for this trend this year. (Uranus, the planetary promotor of all that is unusual and inventive in style, is starting its journey through Taurus the sign which has rule over Persia.) Tunics, flares and Persian designs in material will be noticeable as being worn by those who love out of the ordinary styles.

We believe the Spanish influence in hats will have a waning rather than the rising trend which is hoped for. (Although Uranus retrogrades back into the Sagittarian decanate of Aries, Sagittarius ruling Spain, nevertheless Uranus remains within the orb of Taurus whose vibrations will be gaining in strength as time advances.)

Neck ornaments, scarfs and stoles are denoted as being important in the new modes. (The Uranian influence from Taurus which rules the neck and throat in the anatomy.)

A very interesting contrast is provided by Neptune, planet of mystery and inspiration, in that which is strange and perverse. Neptune's present position in the practical, earthy sign Virgo is responsible for the combinations of heavy dull materials with shiny, glistening or diaphanous substances. For example you are likely to see velvet combined with tulle, dull heavy crepes with sequins or lame, wool with lace.

The above combination of planet and sign is also answerable for the sailor and bellboy influence in the summer hats, dresses and jackets.

Now it is the newsboy cap and as time goes on, (owing to the fact that Neptune continues to transit Virgo, sign of service and labor) more and more of the ideas contained in workers uniforms will be incorporated into styles. The nurses cap, for instance, which we have all admired at one time or another, would make an admirable evening cap of lace or provide the idea for a little velvet street hat for Fall.

SHOPPER'S GUIDE

DURING the first three weeks of September, the Sun is in the sign governing health and healing. It is, therefore, the wise person who will take advantage of this impetus to establish a basis of good health for himself and his loved ones.

Those who are interested in Astrology have the advantage of several illuminating works on health. Among the new books on this subject is "The Zodiac and the Salts of Salvation," which contains a wealth of health information based upon years of research by Dr. George W. Carey and Inez Eudora Perry.

"The Encyclopaedia of Medical Astrology" by Dr. H. L. Cornell, reviewed in a previous issue of the JOURNAL, and "Astro-Diagnosis" by Augusta Foss and Max Heindel, a book known to regular JOURNAL readers, are also heartily recommended by your shopper.

Another matter brought to the fore in September while the Sun passes through Virgo, sign of service, is equipment. This is a good time to examine our wardrobes, homes and offices to see if we are equipped with the inexpensive details that help us to preserve efficiency and order in our lives.

A handy book, of great value as equipment, is "Astrological Keywords" by Manly Hall. Evangeline Adams wrote, "The fact that I turn constantly to 'Astrological Keywords' for quick reference is the highest tribute I can pay the author."

Cheiro's latest book, "Real Life Stories" is heartily recommended. A tang of mystery and adventure penetrates the entire volume. Don't miss it! You will find it advertised on the inside back cover of this issue.—Be sure to ask for an autographed copy.

The JOURNAL office has had many letters asking that it give the names of astrologers that it can recommend for horoscope work. We, conscientiously, can refer you to the advertisements appearing in the JOURNAL and SOLAR ASTROLOGY, inasmuch as we do not accept advertising except from those known to us to be reliable and honest practitioners.

For further detail concerning prices, etcetera, on the books mentioned in this column, or catalogues of other astrological literature, we refer you to the authors mentioned, or to the Bookshop of the Stars, 6605 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, Ralph Kraum, 1717 Vista St., Dept. J., Hollywood, Calif., or D. G. Nelson, 735 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

In the next issue of this column we will deal with the question of astrological schools and courses of instruction in this subject.

DAILY COLOR GUIDE

Note: On a day when a certain planet is badly aspected, its color is apt to prove unfortunate; when the same planet is well configured, its color will be beneficial. We are therefore listing below the colors recommended for use in some portion of your array on the days they are well denoted. The colors are mentioned in order of their importance. Some of them will be found in your wardrobe, others will not, but whenever possible carry at least a handkerchief of the preferred shade.

City Horoscopes

How to Find the Birth Data of Your Home Town

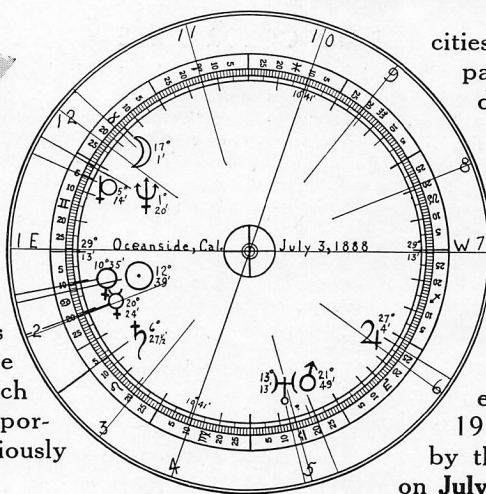

By L. EDWARD JOHNDRO

CONSIDERING the natural interest astrological students have in the horoscope of their birth or residential city or town, it is timely to call attention to one important fact without which the investigator of city incorporation horoscopes may be seriously misled.

Referring back to my articles on San Francisco, Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, in the May and July issues, it will be seen that no mention was made as to the source of the incorporation data. It has always been my practice to obtain this data direct from the particular city's or town's local records. That this course is wise will be clear from the following:

Some time ago, a student mailed to me a long list of California cities' and towns' incorporation dates. With this list was submitted the statement that all the dates were authentic, because obtained directly from Sacramento (California's state capital) records. In checking this list with the data from my own files, as obtained from the city or town records, I found (in so far as my list covered the towns the student submitted) that invariably the dates given him by Sacramento records are from about five to ten days later than the dates furnished by the cities or towns themselves.

Horoscopal comparisons of the two dates were made for several towns, with the result that both natal and directional evidence proved decidedly in favor of the dates given by the town as against those furnished by the State Capitol. The cause of disagreement in the incorporation dates was then sought, and upon inquiry directed to both Sacramento and the cities, it was found that the disparity is due to the difference in date between the city's resolution of incorporation (the true date), arising from the vote thereon, and the date of filing or recording of the incorporation papers at the State Capitol (the false date).

For instance, Alhambra, California, records show the election was held on June 30, 1903. The canvass of the votes by the Board of Supervisors was on July 6, 1903, and the resolution passed by them on that vote was filed in Sacramento on July 11, 1903. Since the determining incorporation action was taken in Alhambra on July 6, 1903, this becomes the true date, the recording made at the State Capitol on July 11 being but incidental routine.

STATE CAPITOL RECORDS DIFFER

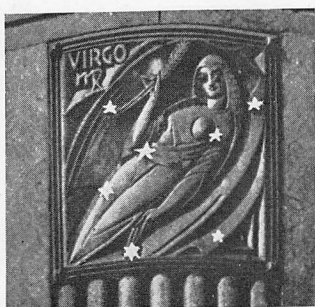

In the case of Riverside, California, the true date is October 1, 1883, though the Sacramento records show October 11, 1883. Oceanside's deciding action in incorporation, was on July 3, 1888, while the filing at Sacramento was on July 12. Other towns show about the same disparity. This is evidently due to local preparation of the application for incorporation, its mail transmission to the State Capitol, and possibly some routine delay in the recording there.

It is therefore quite possible that those students who have not obtained satisfactory results from incorporation charts, have not only applied the date in the wrong way, but have used the wrong date as well, through failure to look into the foregoing facts.

To example the importance of distinguishing the true date from the false date, refer now to the accompanying horoscope of Oceanside as computed for July 3, 1888, by the same method briefly stated in the articles on San Francisco,

Your Solar Forecast

1934 - 1935 for Virgo

Vocational Analysis and Indications for Those Born August 23 to September 22

By LLEWELLYN GEORGE

DURING the next twelve months Uranus will endow you with unusually keen intuition, breadth of vision, unique philosophy and reasoning. You will be able to look at life's problems from new and hitherto undiscovered points of view, while your entire future displays a much brighter aspect than heretofore.

These same powers point to success in your intellectual interests, and especially in connection with transportation, science, invention, education, foreign affairs, religion, legal matters. In all the foregoing you may look for surprising and unusual, but favorable turns.

Sudden journeys and developments in connection with distant places or relatives by marriage may be looked for. You are likely to become interested in some kind of reform or co-operative movement. (Uranus in your solar ninth.)

Throughout the coming year Virgo's specialized interests, such as food, clothing, chemistry, service, healing may be conducted with an unusual degree of inspiration and aesthetic taste. This will be an especially good year for designing or research work. Keep away from unpleasant people and conditions, as you will be more than usually sensitive. Be careful while handling drugs, gas, medicine.

Try to maintain your affairs and residence in as stabilized a condition as possible. Make no important changes unless you are convinced they are practical and feasible. (Neptune in your solar first.)

This year is likely to go down in your diary as one of many journeys. You will attain success in your undertakings in connection with writing, agents, brothers, sisters, neighbors, publishing. You can achieve much popularity through your broad-mindedness, an optimistic outlook on life, and a willingness to adopt current trends of thought. (Jupiter in your solar third.)

Around the middle of February you are likely to encounter opposition or criticism from other people, possibly your marriage partner or opponents in business or social life. Be patient if you face delays. Commence all new undertakings under good rays. (Follow Daily Star Tides.) Do your best to dispel any feeling of gloom or indisposition that your marriage partner may manifest; be tolerant of added responsibility in this connection.

After the above date the formation of new unions, ties, or partnerships is not advised. Protect your present "set-up" in this connection, especially as regards to health and property. (Saturn in your solar seventh.)

SUMMARY: After October 18, 1934 you should feel considerable courage, incentive for action and aggressiveness. Your efforts, if performed boldly, will result constructively, but act always with deliberation. (Mars transits your solar first, second and third.)

Favorable periods are August 23 to November 22, 1934; December 23, 1934 to January 20, 1935; April 21 to May 21, 1935; June 22 to July 23, 1935.

STAR MOTIF PREVALENT

Noticing the frequent use of the star as a decorative device, we were prompted to inquire our host's birth date. Without further solicitation he responded by giving his complete birth data which forms the basis for the accompanying chart, June 21, 1882, 4 a.m., Tarryton Heights, N.Y.

Neptune, Saturn and Jupiter in the mystical twelfth house of this horoscope very likely supplied the reason for his perception of the motive behind our request and the completeness of the data given.

Returning to the house, we spent a pleasant half hour among the "objets d'art" in a large living room almost completely papered with maps. Then, having done justice to refreshments, we bade our host farewell.

Notable in Mr. Kent's nativity are the many planets rising within a space of one hundred and twenty degrees. These show him to be a man of force and aggression—a creator of his own destiny.

RISES WITH THE SUN

Born at sunrise, the warmth, enthusiasm, generosity and dignified appearance of the man are amply signified by the rising Sun in his chart. The solar orb in the first house shows his

To sum up this chart, it shows a man who should be profound in metaphysical matters, with a natural, probably a fatalistic, dramatic and intense. He is likely to retire into some quiet life, devoting his time to study.

At right, Rockwell Kent.

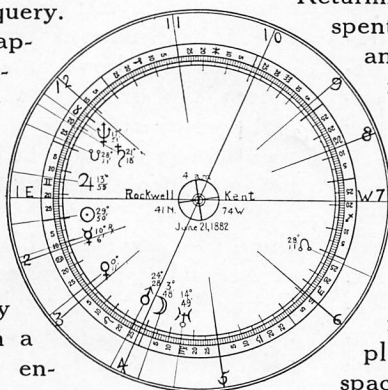

IT was mid-afternoon in early July as we rolled into the drive leading to Rockwell Kent's beautiful estate in the Adirondacks, and with some trepidation contemplated the probable nature of the reception awaiting us. Would the artist look upon us as intruding on his privacy, or would our interest in his art gain us entree?

"Yes, Mr. Kent is at home," was the reply to our query. In a few minutes he appeared, informally attired in swimming costume; explained that he had been availing himself of the coolness of his pool. All uncertainty regarding our reception was dispelled by the cordiality of his greeting, and in a few minutes we were entirely at ease.

A visit to our host's studio, secluded in a nearby grove, proved to be one of the high spots of our itinerary. Apologizing for the heat of its interior, Mr. Kent explained that he worked from sunrise until the temperature became oppressive, compelling him to desist for the balance of the day.

*Neptune's Gold Filled His Coffers
While Uranus Allowed Him a Century to Spend It*

By KARL VAN DYKE

ON the night of July 8, 1839, a horseman galloped up to a small house on the edge of the village of Richford in New York. Without dismounting, he knocked clamorously above the door. A nightcapped head appeared from one of the upper windows and sleepily inquired as to the cause of all the noise.

"Tell Mrs. Thompson," the horseman replied breathlessly, "to come over to our house at once; Mrs. Rockefeller needs her."* Before that night was over a baby, which was soon to be christened John Davidson Rockefeller, was born, signalling the entrance into the world of one who was destined to earn the title of the world's richest man, before he retired from business life.

FRUGALITY VIED WITH EXTRAVAGANCE

The horoscope of Mr. Rockefeller reveals some very interesting contradictions in his nature. Frugality (Sun in Cancer) and downright penny-pinching (Venus in Virgo square Saturn) are shown, but there are also indications of extravagance (Sun square Jupiter) and humanitarian impulses (Sun trine Uranus).

Not only is his proclivity for giving out dimes instead of dollars there, but also the tendency to give tremendous sums of money, which he has donated to universities, libraries, churches, institutions and for various public purposes.

One of the strong, beneficial angles in this chart is that formed by Jupiter (planet of plenty) with Neptune, (planetary ruler of oil). Since Neptune is posited in the house of hopes, wishes and ambitions, this ray from Jupiter to Neptune provided him with plenty of money with which to realize his aspirations.

Read from the standpoint of the solar houses of his chart, an even clearer picture of the fortune (Jupiter) bestowed upon him by Mother Nature (fourth solar house) is shown in its trine to Neptune, which brought the gushing black gold from the secret places of the earth (eighth solar house). This aspect is also symbolic of and responsible for his many secret (eighth house) combines (Neptune) of great wealth (Jupiter) for the control of the country's (fourth house) oil lands.

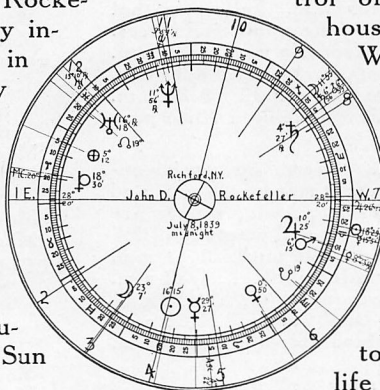

With the Part of Fortune posited in the twelfth division (house of retirement) he was enabled to do what most of us less fortunate mortals would like to do — retire from the maddening cross-purposes of business routine to enjoy the fruits of his life work. Uranus there, trined by the Sun, giver of life, has granted him an unusually long life-span.

AUGUST ECLIPSE SIGNIFICANT

This year, four planets (Sun, Mercury, Venus and Jupiter) are progressed into the sixth division having to do with health, and three planets (Moon, Saturn and Mars) are by pro-

September Security Market Analysis and Trends

By L. J. JENSEN

(George E. Liggett and Associates)

TWO powerful points dominate astrological indications of world conditions in September, as an approach is being made to the opposition of Jupiter and Uranus on October 10, 1934. These points are the two eclipses this summer, one of the Moon in two degrees of Aquarius July 26, and the other of the Sun in seventeen degrees of Leo on August 10. The unusual urge toward freedom generated by the first eclipse, combined with the criticism and dissension of the people toward things as they are, generated by the second eclipse, afford an exceedingly potent combination of forces to approach the timing of the new and drastic changes of the Jupiter-Uranus opposition on October 10. World affairs can be expected to register sensational and far-reaching developments throughout this period.

Marketwise, all the financial hopes and fears of the world are reflected in the fluctuations of security prices, and the current period is expected to be more than usually difficult under the cross currents of conservatism and the probabilities of the launching of further necessitous inflationary panaceas. Viewpoints based on prejudices and a high degree of sectional emotionalism will make statistical opinions difficult to conclude, while even a well-defined viewpoint will be subject to unusual stress.

Currently, and for many months, the indicated normal cyclical trend has been more

Stocks for September

By H. V. HERNDON

Licensed Investment Counselor

● The astrological outlook for September does not show up favorably. I am afraid there is going to be disappointment in stock and commodity prices. If weakness is evident between the 8th and 20th, there will be a decided downtrend between the 20th and 30th.

and more subject to delays and obstructions. This is, however, ground delayed rather than ground lost and the indications remain that by the autumn of 1935 the ground delayed will be recovered.

The point is that extreme measures are expected to be launched in financial matters under the influences mentioned in the foregoing, concerning this summer and early fall period. The die has been cast and there is little opportunity for turning back from unprecedented expansion of business activity and financial matters as these points are passed. There is no more time for idealistic adjustment, as now the trend of affairs must be forced upward, rapidly and at all costs. Whether the instrumentalities developed to bring these forces into being will be headlined in the news is probable, but doubtful. It is more apt to be heralded after it is launched than before.

During September prices are expected to continue somewhat lethargic, but they are expected to work upward in the first part of the month under the impetus of the activity expected to develop in mid-August. (This is written in mid-July.) The weakness in the latter part of September, which is expected to continue into the critical period of early October, is not expected to bring prices, by a considerable amount, toward the lows of the summer. Therefore the view is that the primary trend is bullish, the intermediate trend is bullish and the minor trend bullish early in the month and bearish late in the month. The most outstanding critical days to be watched for change in action are September 10, 11, 27, and 28. The minor critical points are September 1, 8, 17, 24 and 30.

principle. I fought ten years so that the poor man could live as a human being should, have his land, send his children to school, and enjoy human freedom. But most of them were too ignorant to understand my ideas. That is the reason I quit fighting. I kept fighting as long as Carranza was in power, but now with Obregon at the head, I'd be doing more harm than good. So I quit. Nothing can ever be done until the common people of Mexico are educated. Education must come first of all—education, and the land for the peons. The other things must wait."

It is generally believed that Villa was illiterate, but it seems that after his twenty-fifth year he educated himself, probably stimulated by his Mercury in the first house. A short time before his assassination, he stated that he was writing his memoirs, adding with a smile that a "gringo" publisher had offered him fifty thousand dollars for them.

permanent advantages, perhaps by the abandonment of old working methods or conditions. (Venus in the sixth.)

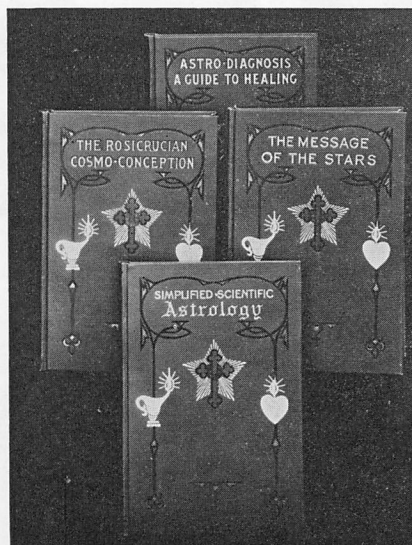

The entertainment world will figure in the world's news. Financial losses in the movies and allied industries are likely. A fire or accident of some importance, in a theater or place of amusement, is not unlikely. (Mars in the fifth.)

The Western and Southwestern states will be more active and restless than the Eastern States. (Eight planets in the West and Southwestern portion of the chart.)

The brightest spot in the planetary picture for the month concerns the nature of our relations with foreign powers. Whatever negotiations we may have with them will be concluded with less difficulty and with more satisfactory results than usually attend such endeavors. (Jupiter trine Saturn from seventh.)

We may expect an important visitor to the States. This visit will have to do with making some fresh plans or agreements with us. Contracts or understandings entered into at this time will prove very satisfactory. (Jupiter, seventh house.)

Power of the Stars

● The Titanic, Lusitania, Shenandoah and the Akron, ships of the sea and air, were all launched under malefic planetary rays. Contrast their fate with the success of the Greenwich Observatory, the dedication of which was planned by Flamsteed for a propitious time. The success and dignity of this institution bears witness to the wisdom of his choice and the power of the stars.

A Fact Often Overlooked

Research on the Moon's Nodes

● Taking into consideration that the influence of the Moon's nodes is evidently stronger as affecting houses than planets in a nativity, and that the houses rule the physical framework of man, the effects of the nodes will have a marked influence over our physical well-being. The use of the Dragon's Head and Tail in medical astrology is therefore of great value.

—Contributed by L. S. Ivey, Wauwatosa, Wisc.

Rectification Data Supplied

● If one would like to find the astrological elements which produce a labor leader and agitator, they may find interesting material in the events given in "Bill Haywood's Book," a biography of the life of Wm. D. Haywood. He was born February 4, 1869 in Salt Lake City and died May 18, 1928 in Russia.

—Edna Cuppermill, Eugene, Oregon.

Birth Data of Ramsay MacDonald

● Born at Lossiemouth, Scotland, on the twelfth of October, 1866, Mr. MacDonald made his entrance onto this earth's stage at 11:30 p.m.

—Arthur Newburg, St. Louis, Mo.

When Were You Married?

● After reading your article in the August issue on the "Right Hour to Marry," have been checking up on the couples in my own social sphere. It is surprising to note how well the time of marriage describes it. One couple chose a high-noon wedding and, although both were employed at the time, they have been in their own business ever since. A wedding performed at 3:00 p.m., while the sun was in the eighth house, afflicted, was dissolved by the death of the man seven years later.

—Submitted by Janet Riley, Columbus, Ohio.

penchant for early rising. Its sextile to Mars, the planet of action, gives him courage, strength of will, frankness and confidence. He loves power and uses it constructively. Loyalty to friends, ambition and idealism are evident.

Jupiter in Gemini, Mercury in the first house sextile the Moon and Uranus, testify to Mr. Kent's popularity, sense of humor, dexterity with the brush, breadth of conception. He is versatile, quick-witted and expressive. Venus in the second parallel Jupiter, shows artistic work to be the source of income.

The Sun, ruler of the third, indicates an authority in the publishing and lecturing fields. The twelfth house position of Jupiter confers success in secluded or obscure places. His Adirondack retreat and lodge in Greenland exemplify this.

Uranus in the fourth house, square to Jupiter, shows he has had a checkered career, exceptional experiences, residence in strange and unusual places, far from his place of birth. This aspect also indicates parental lack of understanding and opposition to his career.

Uranus trine Neptune and Saturn in Taurus, sign of beauty and harmony, supply further testimony of an unusual degree of inspiration, intuition, inventiveness and strength of will.

Mr. Kent possesses a genius for organization, executive ability, resourcefulness. Rising from an obscure beginning, his idealistic nature (Sun in first) aided in elevating him to his present prominence in the world of art.

John D. Rockefeller, Sr.

gression in the eighth, the house of the Great Transition.

While Uranus is now retrograding over the Ascendant of this chart (reaching 28:20 Aries on November 21, 1934) and squaring his natal Mercury until October 23, there will be much "news" concerning his person. This latter aspect prevailed in the transits on August 10, lending further impetus to these rays, foreshadowing even this article.

With all this planetary stimuli focused through the above-mentioned houses, it would be natural that Mr. Rockefeller's chief interest should be his health, and the desire to cheat the Grim Reaper of a victim. We hope he is successful!

Los Angeles and Santa Barbara in the May and July JOURNAL.

Here, as always, one of the most incontestable proofs is to be found by directing the horoscope. That there may be no quibble about the planetary indicators of the event, let us take as the directional event, the closing (Saturn) of the National Bank (Leo) of Oceanside, on February 9, 1933, as a result of the depression (Saturn). But before directing the horoscope, note that not only was Saturn in $6^{\circ}27\frac{1}{2}'$ Leo, but that it was in the second (finance) house, and also, that in accord with the writer's last text* Saturn rules the fifth (banks) of this horoscope of Oceanside. It is thus clear, that the direction for February 9, 1933, must be taken to Saturn in $6^{\circ}27\frac{1}{2}'$ Leo.

DIRECTING THE HOROSCOPE

The arc of direction, as always, is the right ascensional increment of the earth's orbital motion as geocentrically measured by the Sun's apparent progression in right ascension, as follows:

147°29' R.A. progressed Sun $25^{\circ}12\frac{1}{2}'$
Cancer, for February 9, 1933 —103°45' R.A. natal Sun $12^{\circ}39'$ Cancer, at incorporation

43°44' Arc of the event
+342°11' R.A. of natal M.C. $10^{\circ}41'$ Pisces

25°55' R.A. progressed M.C., $27^{\circ}55'$ Aries (near 165 Uranus on fifth cusp)

+90°00'

(a) $115^{\circ}55'$ O.A. ascendant at event, = Asc.
conjunction Saturn in the latitude of Saturn and Uranus.

To show that the progressed ascendant was conjunction with Saturn in the magnetic fields of Saturn and Uranus—which is the same as saying "Asc. mundo conjunction Saturn"—we have:

(b) Geographic Latitude Oceanside $33^{\circ}10' N$
—11' = $32^{\circ}59'$ Geocentric Lat. and,

Saturn $6^{\circ}27\frac{1}{2}'$ Leo in lat. Saturn $0^{\circ}38' N$ =
R.A. $129^{\circ}02'$ (c)

Saturn $6^{\circ}27\frac{1}{2}'$ Leo in lat. Uranus $0^{\circ}39' N$ =
R.A. $129^{\circ}02'$

and,

Declination Saturn $19^{\circ}17'$ Tangent 9.543905
Geo. lat. Oceanside $32^{\circ}59'$ Tangent 9.812241

(d) Asc. Difference $13^{\circ}07'$ Sine 9.356146
and,

$129^{\circ}02'$ R.A. of Saturn as per (c)
— $13^{\circ}07'$ A.D., as per (d)

(a') $115^{\circ}55'$ O.A. of progressed ascendant when mundo conjunction with Saturn or when conjunction with Saturn in the latitude of both Saturn and Uranus—one ruler of the fifth, the other on the cusp of fifth. The aspect is seen to be exact, as per (a) and (a').

It is not to be inferred that the geocentric latitude of the town is to be used in computing value (c) in all cases. But in this particular event, the issue was Saturnine—fated by the national depression, and hence beyond the bank's control. Therefore the geocentric latitude is used†.

It is interesting to note, that by the New Rulership, Mars is the ruler of the second (finance) house, and was in the fifth (banks), disposed of by Saturn (depression, closing) in the second. Further, Saturn was in close 75 degree aspect west of Mars, giving Saturn in this aspect, a Jupiter-Neptune tone‡. Hence the depression (Saturn) that caused the bank (Leo) closing (Saturn) was the result of the past or late (Saturn) financial (Jupiter) boom or inflation (Neptune).

The Boss stars related to Saturn and Oceanside in this event are:

	R. A. in 1933	R. A. Saturn	Star lat, 1933	Lat. Oceanside
(x) #2294	$128^{\circ}32'$
(y) #2304	$129^{\circ}11'$	$129^{\circ}02'$	Body $33^{\circ}14' N$
x+y	$128^{\circ}51'$	$128^{\circ}51'$	Zod. $33^{\circ}09' N$	$33^{\circ}09' -10'$

From this it is seen that the mean R.A. of the two stars in 1933 was the R.A. of Saturn in zodiac, and the R.A. of (y) was but 9' east of the "body" position of Saturn—the bank served the farm community to the east of the town. The stars are respectively in the latitude and five miles north of the town.

It may here be said that my own projected (not progressed) Uranus, ruler of my second, is $6^{\circ}03'$ Leo at Oceanside, and square to Saturn, ruler of my ascendant, in $6^{\circ}03'$ Taurus. When the Oceanside ascendant, directed to said

Uranus and square to Saturn, a few months before the bank closed, under ascendant conjunction its Saturn is $6^{\circ}27'$ Leo, I withdrew my deposits (Saturn) in that bank and moved (Uranus) to San Diego (Saturn), thus suffering no loss by the bank's closing.

Now if the date furnished by Sacramento (July 12, 1888) were used, Mars would still rule the town's second, but it would not be in the fifth. Saturn would still rule the fifth and be in the second, but there would be no direction to Saturn, nor to the writer's Saturn and projected Uranus, to explain the foregoing. The consistent direction would, in that case, have passed some nine years earlier when the boom, rather than the depression, was in making, and when the writer was no nearer Oceanside than his then research retreat in British Columbia.

The obvious lesson here is to be sure you use the right incorporation date before you criticise the efficacy of incorporation horoscopes, and before you rely on them in guiding your local activities by your personal cross aspects therewith.

John Dillinger

In the

Grand Clock of the Universe

By FRANK H. GILBERT

JOHN DILLINGER, the notorious outlaw, was born on Monday, June 22, 1903, at Mooresville, Indiana; Lat. 39:36 North, Long. 86.22 West, and at 11:38:28 p.m., as ascertained by the rules of "The Grand Clock of the Universe," now being taught at The First Temple and College of Astrology of Los Angeles, California.

From the horoscope erected for this time we find Uranus in the Tenth House, Neptune in the Fourth and Mars in the Seventh House, in square to the other malefics by house position, and all three in angles; all bearing positive evidence of a violent death, as well as of the lawless proclivities of the native. Mars in the house of Public Enemies is indicative of the mode of his death, gunshot wounds.

From Revelations 13:10 we find, in part, the following: "He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword." And so he died as he had lived.

If we refer to the known activities of the fixed stars, we will learn how the starry influence impelled, or led him to act during his lifetime. We might be inclined to blame early associates of a negative nature, but back of that was the celestial impulses that prompted his conduct, perhaps on account of karmic conditions.

In Gemini 22.55 we find the Arabian Alhecca, of a Mars' nature, in opposition to Uranus in Sagittarius. This fixed star is Zeta Tauri, the Bull's south horn, and is given the appellation of "the driven," and is classed as violently malevolent.

In Aries 7:51 is located the fixed star "Algenib," of a Mars-Mercury nature, classed as a violent and unfortunate star; it is in opposition to the position of Mars.

In Gemini 8.28 is "Aldebaran" in conjunction with Mercury. This star is Alpha Tauri, and is called "the subduing governor." It is the Bull's south eye, and is classed as giving warlike eminence of the nature of Mars. Mercury rules the Fourth, the end of life.

Among the "Degrees of the Zodiac Symbolized" we find the following: For the Mid-heaven, Sagittarius 19 degrees: "A serpent surrounded by a circle of fire. This symbol denotes one whose mind is subtle and tortuous, resentful and passionate. He will be continually involved in difficulties, and surrounded by dangers. At some time in life he may find himself in a beleaguered city, or in a cruel restraint, from which he will escape only with some hurt to his person or fortune. In one form or another he will be called upon to pass through a fiery ordeal, and throughout life his mind will be chafed and tortured by stress and limitations. It is a degree of captivity."

Uranus in Sagittarius 24 degrees: "A broken tree struck by lightning. This is the index of a mind occupied with abortive projects, vain ambitions, and unfortunate relationships. His life is likely to be short and his end sudden.

supervision. J. Pierpont Morgan, financier, a native of this sign, is an outstanding example of the Virgo sagacity in business.

In professions Virgo seems to incline mostly to writing, chemistry and medicine. Well-known writers born during the time that the Sun was in this sign include: H. G. Wells, Theodore Dreiser, Tolstoy, Maurice Maeterlinck, Bret Harte; Mark Sullivan, editor.

It is interesting to note that Virgo people do well in the motion picture industry. This is very likely due to the fact that it receives an impetus from Neptune, ruler of the cinema and Virgo's planetary polarity, Pisces. Charles "Chic" Sale, with typical Virgo versatility, is equally well-known for his great acting ability and his unique writings. Jackie Cooper, who has appeared with Mr. Sale in many pictures, is also Virgo-born. Ruby Keeler, Fay Wray, George O'Brien, Henrietta Crossman, Fredric March, Marilyn Miller, Greta Garbo and Maurice Chevalier are other Virgo celebrities.

Attention to detail, activity, and general mental ability are qualities which help the Virgo person to success. They can make good in any vocation where these traits are important. A general summary of these callings would include draftsmanship, painting, decorating, gardening, florist work, the clothing or poultry business, dealers in small animals.

This sign also produces efficiency experts, as the Virgo nature abhors waste.

When living along personal lines alone, Virgo people are apt to carry the practical too far into petty detail and congestion. These negative characteristics cause worry, poor circulation, bowel trouble and indigestion. Forget it!

To the sign Virgo are given the cornelian and jade as favorite gems. Its color and that of its ruler, Mercury, is the greyish blue, the shade adopted by the United States government for mail carriers' uniforms. The flowers of Virgo are fern, lavender, azalea and morning glory.

Virgo people sometimes weary of the marriage tie, but, if they gain a divorce, they usually will marry again. To keep them content in marriage or partnerships it is necessary to permit them a change of scene now and then.

They find their most congenial mates, partners and friends among those born April 20 to May 20, December 22 to January 19, October 23 to November 21, June 21 to July 22.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

How To Use Star Tides

Sir:

Having been a reader of your magazine for many months I am taking the liberty of writing in for some information as to the use of the DAILY STAR TIDES guide which appears each month.

Do I understand correctly that when an answer to a question or situation is desired that all that is required is to look up the next aspect in the tabulation—regardless of the planets that may be aspecting—and the answer will be negative or affirmative? Or, must the planet and what it rules be considered. Following the latter may mean, of course, that an aspect might not come up until many hours later or the next day.

I have been following the guide to a certain extent for a long time and have found it helpful, but I have wondered about the above question many times and would greatly appreciate enlightenment at your convenience.

E. R. HARPER,
Hollywood, Calif.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The answer to your first question is "yes." Consider only the next applying aspect in seeking the answers to questions, regardless of the time of culmination. This aspect will indicate also the nature of the aids or hindrances to the proposition.

Choose a time to begin a certain project when the planet ruling it is well-aspected. (See Planet's Keywords.)

Calendar Conflict Confuses

Sir:

..... is there not a misprint in the birthday of Jacob Bohme (see JOURNAL, page 12, August, 1934). If he was born November 17 would he not have his Sun in Scorpio and in the sixth house in the chart? To have it in 4° 26' of Sagittarius, he would have to be born in December, it would seem. Perhaps it was intended to be December 17, 1575.

M. LORRAINE KNAUSS,
Pueblo, Colo.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This apparent discrepancy is accounted for by the fact that Jacob Bohme's birthday is recorded by the old style calendar. See end of first paragraph, page 12, where date is given as "November 17, 1575, (old style)."

True Arc vs. Ptolemy

Sir:

Just received the August edition of your JOURNAL. The ten biggest words in it were used by L. Edward Johndro, when he writes of using the true arc and not the Ptolemy makeshift of a degree a year. When all astrologers forget this makeshift of progressing charts and get down to actual transits, I believe astrology will get somewhere.

EDWARD J. PETERSON,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Fulfilled Predictions

Sir:

You will note the recent severe quakes in western Panama, especially around David (8½°+N) section, as being in the latitude (declination) of Uranus, as cited in "The Devil's Playground"—footnote page 9 of the March issue of the JOURNAL. Also the Gulf of Mexico storm several weeks ago that just missed Tampico again, the gulf storm from the Pluto latitudes that blew in on Texas on July 26 with a tidal wave and the cyclone storm in Mexico this week (date of letter July 27).

Funny about the David-levelling quake (Uranus)—I had just received a letter from a Brotherhood of Light follower, relative to his going down to David shortly on an astrological (Uranus) mission. He mentioned having progressed Moon approaching Mars in Cancer "as likely to take him across the tropic of Cancer." I thought at the time that was a "hot" aspect to be moving his residence (Moon) to so hot (Mars) a spot, but had not had time to write to him. Guess the quake will spoil his astro (Uranus) mission Davidward!
